We Submit the Garments Themselves as Proof of Their Superiority.

Each individual has his own point of view of clothes values—and satisfaction. One man judges by the style; another by the fit; still another by the price. Saks Suits will pass inspection on every point. Judge as you will—your hobby is ours—because these garments of ours are modeled with the best designing judgment—made by the most skilled tailors—and after all is done they are marked at the price our great organization makes possible. If it is the $10 grade you'll find it a very superior suit for $10—not lacking in character nor individuality—and at $40 the line stops because excellence and elegance are exhausted.

These models of ours embrace the extreme and the conservative—the soft rolling fronts, with decided or moderate body-fitting lines. The Norfoks are as they should be made. And the weaves are consistently employed—as suited to the model and the man. That's why we confidently leave it to the garments themselves to convince you. They will if you are the least critical.

$10.00 to $40.00.

Giabardine Raincoats.

Waterproofed by Priestley and made up in our own shops. Black, Olive and Tan; Raglan shoulder; silk yoke and silk sleeve lining. Sizes from 34 to 44.

Special, $13.75.

Our Boys' Shop is the "Clearing House" for the best in Boys' Clothes.

Every maker of Boys' Clothes solicits our orders—but only those who measure up to our standard get them. WE ARE VERY STRICT. We've got to be able to guarantee what we offer you—and there mustn't be any weak points—and there are none. No matter how low conditions permit us to mark the price—there's QUALITY there just the same.

Free—To the first 125 purchasers of a Boys' Suit or Reeler in our Boys' Clothing Department—whether one of these "Specials" or from the regular stock—we shall present a Parker Ping Pong Set.

Boys' $7.50 to $12 Suits, $5.75.

IN THE WORLD OF SOCIETY

ton. The bride bouquet was composed of pink orchids fringed with feathery ferns. A large reception followed before the newly married couple left for New York en route to Porto Rico. They will be here for a short stay the last of the month. In September they will go to housekeeping in this city.

The collection of presents was one of the handsomest ever shown in Nashville—silver, crystal, china, linen, with various pieces of rare vases and bric-a-brac. Among the historic articles was an exquisite piece of china from a relative in North Carolina. It was a set of tea and coffee service in the possession of the famous Dolly Madison, who is an ancestor of the bride. Another interesting heirloom was a large silver spoon of colonial pattern given by George Washington to an ancestor, the donor, the late Col. Anthony Wayne Johnson; silver tea service from brother of the bride; from the faculty of the University of Tennessee were three large pieces of silver, two trays and a salver; and from the state superintendents of the thirteen southern states, the public school teachers of Nashville, a large silver tray; the Carnegie library board a large silver plate engraved border of the frieze of the local library, and a silver pitcher on which was engraved the names of the donors; silver bowl and saucers from the library staff; silver tray from the inter-state improvement workers; silver basket from the club women of Nashville; silver tray from the cracker stands from friends in Knoxville; silver tray from the staff of the bureau of education, silver tray from the Nashville Art Association and a large silver tray from Buford College.

Miss Julia Vail has returned after spending some time at West Point and Flushing, L. I. Mrs. William F. Draper and Miss Draper will sail for Europe the last of this month, to spend part of the summer. Gen. and Mrs. Hoxie are making preparations to close their K street home and go to their Iowa home on the 1st of May. Dr. Abram Simon has returned from a western trip.

Master Matthew Glenwater Tighe entertained a number of his young friends in honor of his tenth birthday yesterday at Hotel Everett. After an automobile trip about town and over the speedway the guests returned to the hotel and were made happy at a table of dainties with favors and goodies. The guests were Naomi Elmore, Frances Settle, Margaret Hart, Dixie Tighe, Randall Gibson, Romula Naon, Charles Ricketts, Harold Nash, James Horrihan, Chester Fannon, Richard and James Montague and Marion Stockley.

Mrs. Luella Wardworth entertained at bridge yesterday at the Highlands in honor of her mother, Mrs. H. Peck of Kansas, and her aunt, Mrs. J. C. Burrows of Michigan.

Paymaster Edward Little of the U. S. ship Mayflower will entertain at tea this afternoon in compliment to Miss Lucy Hoke Smith of Georgia, and for Ensign Alton Simpson, U. S. N. Other expected are Miss Callie Hoke Smith, Miss Katherine Overman, Miss Ruth Trumble, Miss Helen S. Lee, Ensign Elmer Lowry and the other officers of the Mayflower.

Miss Helen R. Potts entertained a number of her friends at her home, 136 C street northeast, Tuesday evening last. The house was tastefully decorated with cut flowers and potted plants. Music, games and refreshments were indulged in until a late hour, when refreshments were served in the dining room. Those present were Misses Leah Merryman, Nina Reichart, Margaret Mellington, Frances Donn, Annie Skeen, Hazel Grier, Ida Keenan, Ruth Burdett, Rene Serrin, Magdeline May, Helen Stanley, Lillian Anderson, Hilda Beetham and Helen Potts, and Messrs. C. McKee, Edward Dombhart, Fred Munchmeyer, Ernest Elmer, Ivan Beers, William Barrington, Harry Smith, Dave McWilliams, Frank Fitzpatrick, Robert Smith, and others. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Marion E. Leek, Mrs. Wheeler Howell and Mrs. W. F. Potts.

The Misses Gibson entertained at a bridge lunch yesterday in compliment to their guest, Miss Brown of Centerville, Md.

THE WELL DRESSED MAN

—BY—

BEAUNASH

Copyright, 1912, by Alfred F. Bryan.

Followers of fashion are impressed with the wane of the unbendingly formal spirit that used to govern afternoon dress. There is much less attempt at a "Sundayed" appearance. The stately frock coat is seen so little nowadays as to make its wearer noticeable, while the braided cutaway, long a sort of mongrel, "half-and-half" coat, has stepped to first place.

Doubtless this change is to be credited to the spreading wish to dress comfortably above all things. The frock is not an easy coat to wear, and it is the rare man who looks his best in it. The cutaway, though, unless it is fastened with a button, but not for everything. That this American idea is becoming the European custom is evidenced by the fact that any man who has "crossed over" lately.

Sporting Scarf Silks.

In new guise comes an old theme—that of weaving scarf silks to symbolize sports of all sports. They are overlaid with miniature figures of riding crops, tennis racquets, base ball bats, golf clubs, polo and lacrosse sticks, canoe paddles and like implements of life in the open. Instead of the fold collar of the evening dress, the scarf is often worn with a collar with a "V" front, opening into a wide, full-knotted scarf.

Colorful shades of green and brown are much approved in cravatting, and the scarf is the mode toward broader scarves that better set off the richness of the pattern. If one's scarf is narrow, plain colors without a figure or vivid stripe should be chosen. Usually, cravat clamps and cuff links are made to match. Nothing is in better taste than simple gold with one monogram etched into it.

The "Strap Stick."

The continental fashion of carrying one's stick, when not in use, is to loop a silk cord fastened to the handle over the wrist. It is called the "strap stick." This makes the straight-top stick more convenient to wield, and is a growing practice among men who go walking-sticked to an evening function, the opera or the play.

Colorful shades of green and brown are much approved in cravatting, and the scarf is the mode toward broader scarves that better set off the richness of the pattern. If one's scarf is narrow, plain colors without a figure or vivid stripe should be chosen. Usually, cravat clamps and cuff links are made to match. Nothing is in better taste than simple gold with one monogram etched into it.

Noelty Walking Sticks. Walking sticks may be much more than simple sticks. Some ingenious designer has allowed them to hold cigarettes, and another, who is not just yet, has fitted them with a tiny electric bulb. This stick, known among late-to-beds as "the keyhole finder," flashes a beam of light, which makes the elusive crevice, whether doorway or keyhole, have to take, when a wavering body projects itself at an immovable one. Another stick has a handle formed to hold matches, both a curiosity and a convenience. There are others of one kind or another, all designed to spare a man's time, temper and pockets.

Possibly, in the cycle of time, a stick will be invented holding a showerbath and a change of linen. Seriously, though, these sticks, while in some degree accessories, are undeniably useful, and, while they can lay no claim to being in any better form than the ordinary companion of a saunter, they are at least worth mentioning. Bent handles, whether straight or curved, seem to be more in vogue than straight handles, which cannot be hung over the arm and are often dropped to their hurt.

Innovations for Smokers. Gold knives, etched with the owner's initials, are dainty and inexpensive trifles for the pocket. In brass, a novel smoking-table ornament consists of a match-stand and cigar cutter combined in one. It has been found that cigars, when carried in a leather case, are prone, from close contact, to absorb the odor of the leather. There is a new "pocket humidifier," which, being very flat, takes up little room and keeps the bouquet of the tobacco intact.

The kit bag, which has supplanted the uncouth dress suit case, is carried by seasoned travelers in a neat, compact form. It usually has a checked English lining, which soaks and soaks. Fitted with a leather case, it is a perfect little man's bag, which, being very flat, takes up little room and keeps the bouquet of the tobacco intact.

Echoes of London. The newest London "wing" has over-lapping tabs that hide the Adam's apple and that lend a snigger, trimmer effect around the neck, thus nullifying the chief objection to the ordinary "wing."

Walking gloves should always be loose so as not to cramp the fingers and retard the circulation. The false notion that gloves should be tight was exploded long ago. Only one's white evening gloves should fit snugly and without a wrinkle.

Laced boots are reviving in vogue, and leather things are preferable to silk stockings. Knitted waistcoats of angora are again in fashion, as well as extremely comfortable and a wee bit "sporty." They are high cut and sometimes have broadly braided rims.

Pleated white shirts sometimes accompany formal afternoon dress, the pleats being very close together and laundered to the "stiffness" of a plain bosom. Quite as many cutaway coats are now braided as braided, the custom of braiding having been overdone that it has become unacceptable to some men.

The frock coat may come into its own again. London has "gazzetted" it as one of the spring modes and the good-form dressers have taken it up. Frocks promise to be restored to full favor within a twelve-month. Walking sticks are carried with the left elbow pressed down upon them, and launched by the left leg of Spain, no is a bit of a dandy and in the "last cry" in evening dress is a gray-white walking stick with a black shaggy cap, needless to say, this is a Parisian idea, for the French go to daring extremes at which our staid taste stands aghast.

If you confess to a fondness for an English-looking sack suit, have it fit you snugly, with high, blunt lapels, narrowish shoulders, curved-in sides and a skirt with a wee bit-of a flare. Have your trousers swig clear of your instep without being noticeably tightened at the bottom. Overlapping trousers seams and "peg tops" are not fashions, but mockeries of fashions. Instead of lending character to one's dress, as very young men imagine, they make a caricature of it.

Pleated Shirts for Formal Dress. Until quite recently "nobody who thought himself somebody" were pleated, or frilled or tucked shirts with formal evening dress. One saw much of them in the continental, but Americans clung to the plain, buttoned-down shirt with a stiff, flat collar. Now, however, the soft-front pleated shirt often accompanies the "swallowtail," being another concession to the spirit of the times.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Marriage licenses have been issued to the following:

George H. Tucker and Creadler R. Lewis.
Daniel V. Peck and Hattie M. Whately.
Thomas H. Morton and Hattie Williams.
Alfred C. Smith and Eva H. Gilbert.
Both of Richmond, because his automobile did not have Maryland license numbers displayed, was fined $10 and costs by Justice Reading in the police court here. Mr. Corby admitted the charge, but explained that his failure to have a Maryland license was due to the neglect of another, to whom he entrusted the duty of obtaining it.

Jacob Gue, who lives near Damascus, this county, was before Justice Reading in the police court here yesterday afternoon on complaint of his wife, who charges him with neglecting to furnish bail for his appearance for trial Saturday.

Mrs. Alpha H. Welliver, widow of Capt. Morrison Welliver, has sold her bungalow in the eastern section of Rockville to Mrs. Florence E. Hickerson of Rockville, the consideration being $1,000. It is understood to be Mrs. Welliver's intention to return to Iowa.

Mrs. Edith F. Gregg of Unity, this county, has been granted an absolute divorce from Ernest E. Gregg, also of this county, by Judge Edward G. Peter, in the circuit court here. The bill charged infidelity. Mrs. Gregg was represented by Attorneys Boule & Boule of Rockville. The proceedings were instituted twelve days ago.

The Brookville High School baseball team easily defeated the team representing Dayton, Howard county, at Brookville yesterday afternoon, the score standing 11 to 4. Story, who pitched for the winners, was too much for the Howard county boys. He allowed but three hits and struck out ten. Brookville made fifteen runs and two errors, and Dayton three hits and six errors. The batteries were Story and Craven for Brookville and Gordon and Howard for Dayton.

Franklin W. Knight, son of Mrs. L.

READY TO OPEN INQUIRY.

Attorneys Selected to Probe "Money Trust" Are So Notified.

After the House passed the Pujol "money trust" resolution by a vote of 241 to 155 yesterday afternoon, Chairman Pujol of the banking and currency committee telegraphed to Samuel Untermyer of New York and Edgar H. Farrar of New Orleans, the attorneys who are to conduct the investigation, asking them to meet the committee at once. The attorneys were asked to arrange for an opening of the inquiry.

The Pujol resolution embraces practically all of the allegations and authority of the original Henry "money trust" resolution. It was the object of violent verbal assaults on the floor of the House yesterday afternoon, particularly from Representative Mann of Illinois, who charged the democrats with trying to "hold up" corporations and force them to support the democratic candidate for the presidency.

Her Busy Life.

From Harper's Bazar.
"Aunt Martha spends all day long hiding her silver in fifty different places to defeat the burglars she is perfectly sure are coming here."

Real Sympathy.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.
"Isn't the stage a funny place! Here's an actress telling how her husband fought a duel with her fiancé. She tells it in such an artless way. But there's something nice about it, too."
